

Additional Home Accessories

Most people consider their pets to be members of the family, so why shouldn't they have the latest in home trends, too?

Keeping your pets safe isn't just a concern indoors; there are many outdoor hazards present also. No matter how well your dog can swim, they can still be at risk for drowning if they can't find the steps. A new collar is available that will sound an alarm in your home if your dog decides to go for a swim.

The Bark Free bark deterrent emits a signal only dogs can hear.

Outside safety for pets

Underground electric fences are still popular with various systems available. Not only do invisible fences provide a safe place for your pet but can be more reliable than a wood fence. Many pets can find a way out of a regular fence from digging underneath or jumping over it. Installing an invisible fence can help to keep your landscaping attractive and can be set up practically anywhere, from wooded areas to rocky terrain. Many pet stores also offer inexpensive solutions to containing your pet in a certain area inside of your home with the use of a signal that can even go through a wall. A cordless transmitter and a collar is all you will need to keep your pet out of sacred areas in your home such as a baby's room, trash area, and dining room.

Pets in the home

Can't keep your pet off the sofa? Train your pet to stay off the couch with a battery-operated mat you lay on the cushions. When your pet touches the couch, surprising beeps will go off quickly deterring your pet from jumping on your furniture.

Your pets deserve the best when it comes to their food and water. Pets water bowls tend to get dirty with food and lose freshness daily. An electronic water dispenser allows your pet to have fresh clean water 24 hours a day. The water dispenser filters out particles of food and is a great device
