(2) The county spent $3.1 million in July 2004 for 101 acres to preserve Altamaha at Heyward Point near Callawassie. Altamaha, which is on the National Register but was unprotected until the county bought it, is the site of a Yemassee Indian tribe village, dating back to the 1700s.

“Altamaha is going to be a place for children to go and study history – lots of history on the site – and have an opportunity to get to the water.
