

The Pete Dye-designed course at Hampton Hall

18-hole course features firmly-rooted Champion Bermuda grass greens and Paspalum turf fairways and is designed to accommodate “both bold and conservative strategic options for play.”

And just a short ferry ride away, Daufuskie Island has reported plans to construct a new course as well. The island is currently home to well-known courses such as Melrose, Bloody Point and the private Haig Point Golf Club.

Something old, something new. Lowcountry golf just keeps getting better and better.

For more information regarding these and the numerous other fine courses in our region, and all over the United States, pick up a copy of Golfer's Guide magazine, or visit www.golfersguide.com.
